

SEEK TO ISOLATE PARALYSIS GERM

New York Physicians Call Conference—162 New Cases Reported.

(By the Sun News Service.) New York, July 12.—An important development in connection with the epidemic of infantile paralysis was promised by Dr. H. Emerson, commissioner of the health department today when he announced that there will be a conference tomorrow of the physicians conducting the battle against the disease. The isolation of the germ would be the first vital step in arriving at the proper course of treatment for infantile paralysis, and a number of prominent medical men are endeavoring to obtain success along that line. At the health department it was said that no confirmed statement had been received as yet regarding the real progress up to date made by Dr. Simons Flexner in his study of the disease, and it was declared that the achievement of Dr. Hideyo Noguchi, the Japanese scientist, who has worked with Dr. Flexner for years, was not one of certain isolation. It is known, however, that the scientists have progressed so far in their work that they feel confident that they will find the trace of the germ and finally isolate it.

EXPECT SUM OF $85,000 FOR PARALYSIS FIGHT

Congress is expected to appropriate $85,000 to be used by the United States Public Health Service in the fight on infantile paralysis which is raging in New York. The original amount asked by Senator McCaddoo was $125,000, $50,000 of which was to be used for assistant surgeons. A member of the House stated yesterday that the latter item was contained in a prior estimate and was rejected during the consideration of the sundry civil bill. "If the remainder of $85,000 is needed," this committee member stated, "it doubtlessly will be appropriated."

IRELAND IN ARMS OVER NEW INSULT

Redmond Declares Marquis of Lansdowne's Speech Declaration of War.

(By the Sun News Service.) London, July 12.—Bitterly denouncing as "an insult to Ireland," the speech last Tuesday in the house of commons by the Marquis of Lansdowne on the proposed government for Ireland, John Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, in a statement today declared that he considered it a declaration of war on the Irish people, and as an announcement of a policy of coercion. There is "an end of all hope for a settlement," in Redmond's opinion, if Lord Lansdowne's speech voices the attitude and the spirit of the British government toward Ireland. Moreover, he says the speech seems to have been made with "the deliberate object of wrecking a settlement."

Redmond says further that the proposed bill is a "breach of faith," and contrary to the terms submitted to the Irish leaders by Lloyd George.

Two Boys and Man Drowned While on Fishing Trip in Eastern Branch.

A fishing boat, occupied by a man and four boys, overturned in the Eastern Branch near the Reform School last night about 10:30 o'clock. Only two of the party came from the stream alive. The dead are William Reynolds, 26 years old; Jack Wall, 9, and Albert Meed, 14, all residents of Greenville, D. C., a settlement near the District line. Two of the boys, who vanished without giving their names, struggled out of the weed-grown stream, met a lone mounted policeman and told him the story. They said the party was fishing when the boat mysteriously overturned. The harbor patrol boat was notified of the accident and by midnight were dragging the stream for the bodies.

they were the center of interest and were compelled to stop and listen to words of appreciation which few of them understood—for they all speak only German. Paul Hiken, a director in the company which financed the trip of the submersible, was the leader of the party. The Capitol, Congressional Library and other government buildings were shown to the visitors, after which they visited the Raleigh Hotel and a full-blown American crab feast at Schneider's, 418 Twelfth street. Last night they were the guests of E. H. Droop, at the Occidental Hotel, and Gus Buchholz did his best to demonstrate that the American hotel chef yields nothing to his German co-worker in the matter of delectable dishes. The men are ordinary sailors, absolutely devoted to the German cause and ready to give up their lives to advance the interests of the Fatherland. "We look on this trip as one great game of hide and seek," one of them said, through an interpreter, "and we are not at all afraid of crossing the Atlantic again, because it is so easy to hide." Today they will visit the Radio towers at Arlington and a trip to Great Falls is included in their itinerary. The members of the party are Wilhelm Muller, George Nagel, Ludwig Schwarzhild,

Calcium's Value in Tuberculosis

As a tonic and remedial agent in the treatment of tuberculosis, this element is being studied by scientists and physicians everywhere. For more than two decades users of Eekman's Alternative have tested its efficiency in such cases, for calcium chloride is one of the chief constituents of this preparation, which has produced beneficial results in thousands of instances. And in this form it is so combined as to be easily assimilated.
